WHEN THE WAR ENDS

UCH of the correspondence to the press associations from Europe, judg ing from that received by the Bonanza, is devoted to the invasion of what was originally man's territory by woman. She runs street cars. She toils in the field. She dons apron in the factory. She even hits the nail on the head in her new role as carpenter,

People who still favor a low protective tariff, although few there are at present, say that their position is rendered tenable by the fact that so many men will have been slaughtered or maimed by the time the war ends that this country will not need fear competition from foreign lands. But the menace is rendered even more grave by the war. The women of Europe are no longer simply housewives. They are engaged in manufactures and when their ranks are supplemented by the returning multitudes. Europe will hum with industry, and extremely ill paid industry at that. A tariff wall that will be almost prohibitive is the only salvation for the American manufactur and the Ameri

MORALITY AT $8.00 A WEEK

T has taken the Illinois vice commission, presided over by a sensational lieutenant governor, two years and a half to reach the conclusion that female virtue in that state involves a matter of about $8 a week. Unlike most inquisitions of the kind, this one finds that girls in domestic service are more subject to temptation than others, and to correct the evil it recommends not only the establishment of a minimum wage, but of "a definite social status" for all such workers.

The pity is that problems of this nature are so often left to demagogues and faddists, reinforced by dealers in political and social specialties that never yet have been found effective. Injustice in the matter of wages and treatment no doubt lies at the root of a great deal of misery, but the assumption that a sure cure for moral lapses is to be had in any stated stipend has social and industrial problem well worth the attention of the state is the number of young women destitute of family or friends who are attempting self-support. Most working girls have homes, and their earnings, whether large or small, contribute to the support of these homes. The clumsy hands of government can neither increase the income of such families materially nor enforce morality upon them. In fact, such people probably live as decently as a rule as the more favored persons whose daughters the Illinois commission finds are subject to the ill effects of "alternate drinking and dancing in fashionable restaurants.

POLICY BUILT ON FALSE ASSUMPTION

NATIONS certainly have not reached the point yet where they are not willing, when the occasion offers, to take advantage of the weakness of another nation to carry out a policy of aggrandizement."-Former Presi-

The whole issue of national preparedness pivots on that. If true, it would be folly for the United States not to prepare. If untrue, Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson all are wrong, and money expended on a navy, an army or a citizen defense organization might be ap-

If Taft's conviction that nations still exist with a willingness to aggrandize themselves is true, those nations will move along the lines of least resistance. If Mr. Taft has laid down a sound premise, then Senator Jones of Washington must be regarded as an unsound and dangerous adviser when he asserts himself "against talk for national preparedness and for peace talk instead."

By the same token, if that is true, the head of the national grange promulgates dangerous doctrine when he urges abandonment of Washington's axiom for the new axiom, "In time of peace prepare for more peace. "Educate the children to love peace," adds National Master Oliver Wil son, "and a world peace will not be far distant."

The looseness of that doctrine lies in the unpleasant fact that pacifists in the United States cannot educate the children of the whole world. While they are teaching American children to refuse to defend their country, German, Russian, British, French and Japanese leaders of national thought and molders of national policies will be teaching their children a different doc-

It is passing strange that Senator Jones, with the plain lessons of the war before him, can take upon himself the grave responsibility of opposing measures of national defense while glibly asserting:

There is no nation on the face of the earth that would dare attack the United States in the near future. In Europe the nations will have had all the fighting they want by the time the war ends, no matter which wins. Where is the danger?" We were told, and we believed, when the Balkan war ended two years ago that the Balkan cuontries had founght to exhaustion and would fight no more

We are mistaken. Bulgarians can strike now all the harder blows by rea son of their recent field experience in battle. The Turks are fighting harder, and the Serbians and the Montenegrins.

The exact converse of Senator Jones' assertion is true. Countries that have remained at peace are reluctant to oppose a country that has just emerged from war, for the very obvious reason that the country with recent war experience has great armies of seasoned veterans; officers who know how to ead them in trench and in action, and practical knowledge drawn from

The United States was never so ready and capable of facing a foreign foe as after Lee's surrender at Appomatiox. Our civil war ended, we reasserted the Monroe doctrine against the French and Maximilian. We stood resolute before Great Britain on the Alabama claims controversy.

"Where is the danger?" inquires the Spokesman-Review. If history's less ons are to be heeded, where is not the danger?

During the past springtimes large quantities of seeds have been ditributed from this office, and during the past month we have received many inquiries for seeds. From the information that we have received from Washington there will be no government seeds to be distributed from this office this year, the senators and congressmen sending their allotments direct through the mail. If you are to get any seeds you must make your requests direct to the
